

For Immediate Release

March 30, 2021

Air Borealis & Nunatsiavut Group of Companies Confirm that Torngat Mountains Base Camp Will Not Open for Tourism and General Visitation in 2021

Happy Valley—Goose Bay, NL— In partnership with the Nunatsiavut Government, Air Borealis and the Nunatsiavut Group of Companies will not be opening the Torngat Mountains Base Camp and Research Station (TMBC) for tourism and general visitation during the 2021 season.

The Torngat Mountains Base Camp and Research Station is located on Labrador Inuit Land adjacent to the southern boundary of the Torngat Mountains National Park.

“The ongoing COVID-19 public health crisis continues to make the safe, practical operation of the Base Camp impossible for tourists and general visitors at this time. Despite this setback, we remain deeply committed to our work with Air Borealis, the Nunatsiavut Group of Companies and Parks Canada towards a sustainable, long-term future for Base Camp that will let visitors and researchers continue to experience our homeland,” says Nunatsiavut’s Minister of Language, Culture and Tourism, Jim Lyall.

Air Borealis and the Nunatsiavut Group of Companies look forward to welcoming visitors to enjoy the upgrades to site facilities, and additional experiences that will continue to exceed guest expectations in 2022.

About Torngat Mountains Base Camp

An Inuit homeland, one of the last untamed, unspoiled places left on the planet. Comprised of 9,700 square kilometres of spectacular wilderness, the Torngat Mountains National Park stretches from Saglek Fjord to the northern tip of Labrador, and westward from the Atlantic seacoast to the Québec border.

View Torngat Mountains NL Tourism video here: <http://ow.ly/2ilk30kSVof>

View Torngat Mountains Parks Canada video here: <http://ow.ly/Fvqf30kSVwP>

Visit Torngat Mountains Base Camp online at the following addresses:

www.thetorngats.com

www.facebook.com/TheTorngats

www.twitter.com/TheTorngats

About Air Borealis

Through an historic agreement between the Inuit and Innu of Labrador, together with PAL Airlines, Air Borealis provides regular scheduled flights and cargo services to the north coast of Labrador as well as charter and skedevac services to the north and south coasts of the region and throughout Eastern Canada. The combined service and route networks of Air Borealis and PAL Airlines means more flight options, more routes, and total ease of travel for passengers.

Visit Air Borealis online at the following addresses:

www.airborealis.ca

www.facebook.com/AirBorealis

www.twitter.com/AirBorealis

About Nunatsiavut Group of Companies

The Nunatsiavut Group of Companies (NGC) operates under the Labrador Inuit Capital Strategy Trust and has interests in aviation, marine, fishing, construction, logistics, real estate, and land development. NGC, with its wholly owned as well as subsidiary companies, employ approximately 500 people, with operations throughout Nunatsiavut and beyond.

Visit NGC online at:

www.ngc-ng.ca

www.twitter.com/nunatsiavutgroupofco

www.facebook.com/nunatsiavutgroupofcompanies

Media Contact:

Media Contact for Nunatsiavut Government: Bert Pomeroy – bert.pomeroy@nunatsiavut.com, 709-896-8582

Media Contact for Nunatsiavut Group of Companies: Sarah Leo – sleo@ngc-ng.ca, 709-722-1967

Media Contact for Air Borealis: Joseph Galimberti – joseph.galimberti@palaerospace.com, 709-743-7445